

FOR SEPARATED PARENTS

One calendar for two homes

Plan the children's time in one place. Both parents see the same plan, and your own diary stays private.

WHAT IT DOES

Everything about the children's time in one shared calendar

Who has the children, day by day

Set up the pattern you've agreed once, with school holidays and handover times. Each day is shaded for the home the children are in.

Changes need both of you

Ask for a swap in the app. Nothing changes on the calendar until the other parent accepts it.

Your own plans stay yours

Mark anything as Only me and the other parent never sees it. Family events go on the shared calendar.

A calendar and nothing else

There's no chat and no feed, so there's nothing to keep checking. Open it when you need the plan.

GETTING STARTED

Set it up on your own, then invite the other parent

1 Sign up

Go to twofrontdoors.com and sign in with an email code or your Google account.

2 Add the children's time

Enter the children and the parenting pattern you've agreed, including holidays.

3 Invite when you're ready

Send the other parent an invite. They see the same family calendar once they join.

Grandparents and childminders can see the family calendar for the children you choose.

Using Google Calendar? You can send the family plans to it so they sit beside your work diary.

PRICE

One subscription covers everyone on your family calendar

£4.99 a month
or £39.99 a year

Free for the first 30 days. Whichever parent pays, the other parent and anyone else you invite are covered.

Good to know

- ❶ It doesn't give legal advice, and it doesn't decide or enforce arrangements.
- ❷ It isn't approved by any court, and it isn't a record of what parents said to each other.
- ❸ Whoever shared this leaflet with you can't see your calendar.
